Excerpt: . tributed the victory to the latter; then they celebrated in wanton half meanings, the gallantries of the day, and finished by pastorals like bravuraa. Women of fashion would have heard them with rapture. t When the daughters of Pierus had finished, Calliope took on herself the task of singly replying to them. She sung theu the powerful fecundity of the Master of the universe, who animates all beings with a breath, and, with a look, plunges them into annihilation; then she sung the adventures of Deucalion, and Pyrrha: -- Indignant at the crimes of men, Jupiter had covered the earth with an immense sea, and the human species was no more. The highest mountains had concealed their summits j one alone yet elevated its head above the waves; it was Mount Parnassus, situated between Attica and Boetia. Over this vast and liquid plain,...
