Forgotten Books, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from The Center Line, Vol. 2: June, 1939 Often the employer is as much to blame for vague, indefinite replies as is the applicant, when with a little effort he could help the poor job -hunter to intelligently ask for work. He may consider it a school girl s trick to sit down and write out what his ideal man must have and, like her, will probably have to take someone who falls short of the specifications, but he will undoubt edly get better help that way than by merely asking for a damn good hand, like Joros. Given the opportunity, the job hunter can measure his qualifications against those required and if he can see that he cannot do the work he is not likely to waste time asking for it. This is not a lament nor a complaint for if we received applications only from qualified persons, each complete, clear and definite, we would soon tire from.the strain of looking at perfection.and our existence would become dull. Even the prospect of sufficient applicants to populate the country adjacent to our...
