Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2013. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .This publication provides guidance to EPCs about several issues on equivalence and noninferiority. This guidance is urgent for many reasons. First, comparative effectiveness research (CER) involves comparing active treatments, and these comparisons often suggest equivalence. What kinds of data permit a valid conclusion of equivalence? As CER receives greater prominence in critical medical decisions, evidence reviewers need clear and consistent guidelines for concluding equivalence. The same is true for individual trialists. However, our perspective is that of a systematic reviewer confronted with multiple trials making the same active comparison. A second reason for urgency is that the medical literature has seen a recent increase in the number of trials actually defining themselves as equivalence trials or noninferiority trials. How should evidence reviewers incorporate such trials? Third, the wider field of systematic review has no guidance on equivalence and noninferiority. Some guidance exists from regulatory agencies and academia, but these are targeted to individual trialists, not reviewers. Fourth, systematic reviewers vary greatly in their choice of language for concluding equivalence or noninferiority (e.g., similar effects, no evidence of a difference, evidence of no difference, evidence does not suggest a difference, treatment A is not worse, treatment A is not superior, etc.). This variation is confusing and possibly misleading to users. Before presenting our methods and guidance, we briefly discuss the difference between equivalence trials (EQ) and noninferiority (NI) trials. These trials share the concept of ruling out the possibility of an important effect. They differ, however, in the typical clinical context and the permissible conclusions. EQ trials aim to determine whether a new treatment is therapeutically similar to a standard treatment within a predefined margin of equivalence (e.g., a ratio of...
