International flights bound for the United States continue to be targets of terrorist activity, as demonstrated by the October 2010 discovery of explosive devices in air cargo packages bound for the United States from Yemen. The Transportation Security Administration (TSA) is responsible for securing the nations civil aviation system, which includes ensuring the security of U. S. -bound flights. As requested, GAO evaluated (1) the steps TSA has taken to enhance its foreign airport assessment program since 2007, and any remaining program challenges; (2) TSAs assessment results, including how TSA uses the results to guide future efforts; and (3) what opportunities, if any, exist to enhance the program. To conduct this work, GAO reviewed foreign airport assessment procedures and results, interviewed TSA and foreign aviation security officials, and observed TSA conduct a foreign airport assessment. While these interviews and observations are not generalizable, they provided insights on TSAs program. This is the public version of a sensitive report GAO issued in September, 2011. Information that TSA deemed sensitive has been omitted. Since 2007, TSA has taken a number of steps to enhance its foreign airport assessment program, some of which were taken in response to GAOs prior recommendations. However, challenges remain in gaining access to some foreign airports, developing an automated database to better manage program information, prioritizing and providing training and technical assistance to foreign countries, and expanding the scope of TSAs airport assessments to include all-cargo operations. TSA has various efforts under way to address these challenges. Based on GAOs analysis of TSAs foreign airport assessments conducted from fiscal year 2006 through May 2011, some foreign airports complied with all of TSAs aviation security assessment standards; however, TSA...
