Central to the mission of the church with each passing generation is the elucidation of the gospel of Christ, which is the heart of the Christian message. Witness to Gods saving word in Scripture comes in response to discussions and debates arising over the course of church history. Our study highlights some of the unity and disunity found within the Reformed tradition, Reformation and modern. Beginning with the subject of the development of doctrine over the course of church history, we take up the foundational issue of biblical hermeneutics (the question of how we are to interpret the Bible). The year 2017 marks the Protestant Churchs 500th anniversary (October 31). We consider, secondly, Protestantisms two leading theological principles--the formal (the doctrine of Scripture) and the material (the doctrine of justification by faith alone). In the final section, we critique departures from the teaching of historic federalism found within contemporary Reformed orthodoxy, which strikes at the very heart of what it means to be Reformed in theology. Crucial in this long-standing and ongoing dispute is the interpretation of the Mosaic Covenant as in some sense a republication of the original Covenant of Works with Adam at creation. Covenant and justification are the focal doctrines under study. In Reforming the Christian Faith, Mark Karlberg continues his clarion calls for a consistent covenant theology and adherence to the core reformation doctrine of justification by faith alone. By perceptive analysis of current developments in the convoluted discussions and concerning decisions occurring in conservative reformed institutions, he reveals contemporary confusion on the relation between works and grace that, combined with political maneuvers in academic and ecclesiastical circles, undermines the churchs credibility and witness. --Meredith M. Kline, Ranked Adjunct Assistant Professor of Oriental Languages,...
