ME, DINGO AND SIBELIUS: A FEELGOOD NOVEL ABOUT AN UGLY DUCKLING WITH LOW SELF ESTEEM WHO ACHIEVES SUCCESS (PAPERBACK)

Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Charlie Churchill is the odd one out, the ugly duckling in a dysfunctional all-female Liverpool family. She s the one who works a forty hour week, pays the bills and provides a modicum of common sense, plus - when she has time - a healthy cooked meal to balance the takeaways and ready meals the others thrive on. She s the one who looks like her deceased Dad, while Georgie and her illegitimate daughter Rosie (father the elusive Arsehole Alan) look like Mum. Slim, blonde, leggy and beautiful. It s too soon to tell with Georgie s baby Daisy (also illegitimate, father unknown but the consequence of a night s clubbing). Daisy, still bald-headed, currently resembles Harry Hill without the specs but will no doubt metamorphose into yet another blonde Churchill beauty. Charlie s escape from the shadow of her family is the Sundowners Retirement Home, where she has worked for the past five years as a lowly carer. Here, surrounded by her wrinklies as Georgie calls them, she can forget her daily concerns: the fact that her life is going nowhere, that she s still a virgin at thirty-two, that there s no likelihood of ever finding a husband or having a family of her own, that she s insufficiently educated or qualified to climb the ladder of success. But when Dingo, her favourite resident, dies and leaves her a fortune, her life changes dramatically. How she copes with becoming a millionaire and carrying out his last wishes against a background of suspicion, envy, hostility and eventually a tragedy, is the theme of this novel.
